Hashmat Ullah, a God fearing, devout Muslim mechanic was about to repair an old V8 ford engine that once carried the ashes of Mahatma Gandhi, when his community leaders called for a strike in the locality. They were protesting the arrest and unjust treatment of innocent Muslim youths by the police in connection with a bomb blast in the town. Hashmat Ullah is now caught in a dilemma: Should he support the protest and abandon the repair of the engine or go against the wishes of his community?
